

MORE PAVING FOR KENDALL ASSURED

Seventh Street Residents
Petition City for Relief

A resolution has been prepared by the city attorney asking for bids to the paving of Seventh street and a portion of College avenue in Kendall. The resolution was presented to but was not passed by the city commission Friday because of small changes to be made. It will probably be presented again at the meeting next Tuesday.

Property owners along Seventh and on College recently appeared before the commission and demanded that they be given paving. They declared their willingness to see their streets paved without the asphalt surfacing. Ralph J. Lamb, who headed the Kendall delegation to the commission meeting, declared that of all the improvements needed in Kendall, paving is the most pressing. For that reason the commission decided to enter its effort upon the paving of Seventh street and College avenue.

If this paving is bid, it will connect the paving at the present terminus on Iowa avenue to the Hudson Arrow hard surfaced highway. It will also allow the Tulsa street railway company to change its track on seventh from a point only a few inches from the property line to the center of the street, where it will conform to the street grade.

present it is alleged to be 7 and two to three feet above the grade. P. G. Walker, local manager for the Public Service company, has assured the city commission and residents of Kendall that material is now on hand and that work is already started on clearing the drainage system in Kendall by additional rights may be located as needed. The Standard Paving company, Barker Washington company and Thomas & Pleasant may bid on seventh street if they can arrange the financing the work.

SURETY BOND MAY NOT BE REQUIRED

If Public Is Willing to Overlook the Matter,
City Is Willing

If property owners are willing to allow paving contractors to proceed with the contracts in their districts without requiring a surety bond, the city commission should be allowed to proceed with such contracts.

The E. P. McCormick Paving company holds the contracts in districts Nos. 224 and 225, which are on Victor avenue and Twelfth street. These contracts were prepared last April before the present city administration took office. Prior to the advent of the new administration, McCormick had furnished his own surety, which was noted in records. Although the contracts specified that bonds should be furnished in proper amount and deposited with the city auditor, to insure the completion of the contracts and the maintenance of paving for the five-year period.

These two contracts on Victor and Twelfth street were recently before the city commission. City attorney Frank E. Duncan declared emphatically that so long as the contract read as it did he would not approve letting the contracts until it had been amended to state that the city might be held liable in case of default.

McCormick's representative was virtually refused to furnish the bond, declaring that even though specified in the contract it had not been customary and that the contracts were taken under the assumption that this custom would continue.

Citizens to Decide. So the city commission decided to leave the settlement in the hands of the property owners. At the commission meeting Friday, a petition from the property owners was presented asking that the paving contracts be allowed to proceed with the contracts and that the clause in the contracts requiring a surety bond be disregarded.

It was first decided to refer the matter to the city attorney and the city engineer for a report.

"I can give you my opinion right now," Duncan declared promptly. "I haven't changed my mind, nor will I change it. I would not approve these contracts until their requirements have been fulfilled. Of course, the property owners want paving, but the city should not pay liable for what might happen some day."

However, the commission decided that if the property owners wanted to make an exception, their plea would be granted.

Oh, Boy!

But we are thankful to our many friends, patrons, and boosters, who have helped us to build this wonderful cleaning business.

We want you to know this business was established in 1906, and enjoyed a nice business right from the very start, being the first place in Tulsa to do dry cleaning with machinery.

But since the present management took over the business four years ago the 15th day of this January, with your help we have increased the volume of business, until the year just passed we did nearly $40,000 more than was done by the other management in 1916.

But we are not satisfied. We want to make it more than $50,000 in 1921. So let's go now—all together "Pull".
